BOUNDLESS LEARNING™ EXPANDS ONLINE LEARNER COLLABORATION WITH TWO UNIVERSITY PARTNERS

NEW YORK (Sept. 6, 2023) — Two leading universities — Hawai'i Pacific University in Honolulu, Hawai'i; and Norwich University in Northfield, Vermont — are expanding their online degree programs in health care and business through Boundless Learning™.

"Boundless Learning is privileged to expand our partnerships with these two prestigious universities to provide a range of learner-centric degree offerings in disciplines important to the medical, science and business communities," said Kees Bol, Boundless Learning CEO. "Each engagement is an example of tailoring learner design and curriculum strategies to both partner and learner needs."

Boundless Learning will collaborate with each university partner on services and solutions such as learning design, marketing, recruitment, student support and retention, online helpdesk and tutoring.

- Hawai'i Pacific University: Hawai'i Pacific University has tapped Boundless Learning to launch two online master's degrees: a Master of Arts in Health Communication and a Master of Science in Product Management. The first classes will begin in the Spring of 2024. With a widely diverse student body, Hawai'i Pacific University draws learners from more than 100 countries. "Embracing our unique geographical stance, Hawai'i Pacific University has found an invaluable partner in Boundless Learning," said Jennifer E. Walsh, Ph.D., Senior Vice President and Provost. "Working hand in hand with their knowledgeable and dedicated team, we have thoughtfully developed opportunities to cultivate higher education access for diverse populations. This partnership exemplifies our commitment to bringing together people from all walks of life across the globe."
- Norwich University: Norwich University is expanding its relationship with Boundless Learning to offer two new degrees and an extension to its existing Master of Science in Nursing (MSN). Starting in the Spring of 2024, Norwich will offer a new bachelor's degree and master's degree in public health. The university also will begin offering a community and public health track for learners in the MSN program. "Boundless Learning has been a trusted partner with Norwich University for several years, and we are excited to expand our relationship to include two new degrees in public health," said Provost Karen Gaines. "Graduates from Norwich's public health programs will help address critical shortages in the nation's health workforce. Our program prepares students to be public health leaders who analyze and evaluate global health research and to influence public health policy at all socio-ecological levels."

It's our goal to empower graduates to lead public health initiatives for positive change in their communities." In addition to relevant public health coursework, these programs will include a focus on military content, reflecting Norwich University's legacy as the nation's oldest private military college and birthplace of Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC).
